Burke verdict gets range of responses

Nearly five years after the violent shooting deaths of Tracy Burke and Karen Comer at a Rineyville home, the victims' families, police and others attached to the long-running case held a private memorial service Tuesday outside a hotel near Fort Campbell hours after a military jury found Brent Burke guilty of the crimes.

Burke, estranged husband of Tracy Burke, was sentenced to life without possibility of parole, bringing closure to those who have struggled through five trials — two mistrials, two hung juries and a court-martial. Burke was convicted of premeditated murder, felony murder, burglary, child endangerment and obstruction of justice.

Local prosecutors attempted to try the ex-soldier four times in the shooting deaths but, against the families' wishes, the charges were dismissed without prejudice last June.

"Justice is finally done," said Carey Aldridge, the families' private attorney based in Elizabethtown.

E'town man charged with sex abuse

Runyon also faces sodomy charges

By SARAH BENNETT
sbennett@thenewsenterprise.com

An Elizabethtown man faces multiple felony sex charges involving three alleged victims following a weeks-long investigation by the city's police department.

Charlie A. Runyon, 44, is charged with first-degree sodomy and two counts of first-degree sexual abuse. According to police, two individuals filed complaints March 21 against him with the Elizabethtown Police Department and a third filed a complaint March 25.

One complainant is a male younger than 18.

A police citation said Runyon admitted to the actions Tuesday during an interview, after which he was arrested and lodged at the Hardin County Detention Center.

Runyon is accused of groping two adults, including a woman, according to an EPD news release. He's also accused of raping the juvenile.

According to the police citation, the juvenile reported the incident caused him "much pain and discomfort."

Runyon was arraigned Wednesday in Hardin District Court via video feed. He is scheduled to appear Monday for a preliminary hearing.

First-degree sodomy is a Class B felony, punishable by 10 to 20 years in prison upon conviction.

Runyon's bond is set at $50,000 cash.

Alcohol played a role in Pine Valley drowning

Davis was found in pond at golf course

By SARAH BENNETT
sbennett@thenewsenterprise.com

An autopsy report for a woman found dead April 6 in a pond at Pine Valley Golf Resort reveals the cause of death as drowning with alcohol consumption playing a role in the fatality.

Jane E. Davis, 51, of Elizabethtown, died from asphyxia, a lack of oxygen, by drowning, according to a report completed by the Office of the Medical Examiner.

"Acute ethanol intoxication is a contributory factor," the report reads.

Davis' blood alcohol level at her time of death was 0.261, according to the report.

According to WebMD, a blood alcohol level of 0.20 or higher can lead to difficulty walking, double vision, nausea and vomiting. According to the autopsy report, police

Preschools named Classrooms of Excellence

By KELLY CANTRALL
kcantrall@thenewsenterprise.com

Preschool in Hardin County Schools continues to be recognized for "excellence."

Preschool teachers Erin McPherson and Zola Walker received Classroom of Excellence distinctions from the Kentucky Department of Education, giving Hardin County Schools four preschool classrooms recognized with the honor.

Being named a Classroom of Excellence by the state is a process for preschool classes that involves several steps. It includes an all-day observation in which a Department of Education representative evaluates the environment of the room and the interaction between students and teaching staff, a qualitative self-study in which the lead teacher reflects on lessons and how they implement early childhood standards, then another meeting with a department representative.

In January, 25 preschool classrooms had earned the distinction out of more than 1,000 preschool classrooms in the state.

After teachers Joan Hill at New Highland Elementary School and Maryjane Boes of Heartland Elementary School completed the process, other preschool teachers became interested in doing the

Stamping hunger

Area postal services support food pantries

By AMBER COULTER
acoulter@thenewsenterprise.com

Postal workers across the nation plan to help feed hungry people in their communities Saturday during the 20th annual Stamp Out Hunger event.

The event takes place in about 10,000 cities nationwide with support of more than 200,000 letter carriers. That makes it the largest one-day food drive in the country with an average collection of 70 million pounds of food, said Pete Countryman, a retired postal worker and annual participant in the food drive.

Elizabethtown and Radcliff usually bring in about 8,000 pounds of food each, he said.

Post offices in Hardin County have participated in the event for years. This year, for the first time, all post offices in the county plan to participate.

Residents are asked Saturday to leave nonperishable food items, preferably in bags, next to their mailboxes before letter carriers arrive to deliver their mail.

Carriers will load the food into their vehicles and take it back to their respective post offices. The post offices will give the donations to local food pantries to help hungry community members.

A collection container also will be available in the lobby of the post office on Dolphin Drive in Elizabethtown.

Lonnie Gaskins, a letter-carrier in Elizabethtown, said collecting the most food has become a friendly competition between carriers.

"Any time you can do something to help the community and also be a team player by getting the food back to the post office, you want your truck to be full of food," he said.

Hauling the donated food can be heavy, tiring work, but it's worth it, Gaskins said.

"When you back up to that dock and you see the response from your route that day, it makes you feel good," he said.

Elizabethtown Postmaster Jeff Riggs said he began to understand when he started as a road carrier in Sonora that postal workers are part of the communities they serve. He wants other postal workers to understand their role is more than mail delivery.

David Dozer, director of Helping Hand of Hope, said the event takes place during spring because that is when food donations tend to drop off.

"The hunger never stops," he said. "It doesn't take a vacation."

Community members have been leaving more canned goods each year, and they deserve to know how much good they have done, Dozer said.

"These folks wouldn't have food at the end of the day if this wasn't happening," he said.

The donations are a tremendous help to the budget of the organization, which typically distributes between 40 and 50 boxes of food each day, Dozer said.

Donated food means money Helping Hand of Hope doesn't have to spend buying food from Feeding America, Kentucky's Heartland. That helps, even though Feeding America's price is fair, he said.

Last year's donations from Stamp Out Hunger allowed Helping Hand of Hope to avoid having to order canned goods for 30 days.

The organization's two offices typically serve more than 25,000 clients each year at an annual cost of $150,000.

Jury selection begins in Galenski trial

First ended with no verdict on complicity to murder charge

By SARAH BENNETT
sbennett@thenewsenterprise.com

Jury selection began Wednesday in the second trial of Conner J. Galenski, one of three charged in the shooting death of Louisville teen Mackenzie Smyser in November 2010 in Hardin County.

A trial was first held in October, during which a jury found Galenski guilty of complicity to tampering with physical evidence but was unable to reach a verdict on the charge of complicity to commit murder. The 19-year-old was sentenced to five years.

Kentucky State Police said Galenski, Ryan Wilt and Jason Gowers drove Smyser to a location in Radcliff off Ky. 313 near Patriot Lane under the guise of committing an armed robbery. There the teens are accused of repeatedly shooting Smyser.

His body was found Nov. 5 with four gunshot wounds to the face and chest.

In 2011, Wilt and Gowers accepted plea deals, each receiving 30 years in prison. The two testified as witnesses for the commonwealth during the October trial.

"(Smyser) thought we were going to kill him," Gowers said during his testimony about the night of the shooting. "He asked if we were going to kill him."

Galenski is represented by private attorney Rick Hardin, who also served as counsel during the first trial.

Opening statements are expected to begin today.

Man injured in accidental shooting

An Elizabethtown man is in University Hospital in Louisville after he was wounded in an accidental shooting Monday at a Winfield Court residence.

Jeremy M. Storey, 27, sustained a gunshot wound to the right lower thigh after a friend's firearm discharged while the man was cleaning it, according to a news release from Elizabethtown Police Department.

The shooter, 22-year-old Aaron J. Taggart, told police the .40-caliber Springfield XD gun was new to him, according to the release. He was taking it apart to clean it when the weapon fired.

The preliminary investigation concludes the shooting was an accident, police said.

Virgil Willoughby, EPD's public information officer, said though Storey was in stable condition Wednesday, his injuries "could have been bad."

Memorial for slain student installed at school

A memorial for a 9-year-old girl who was beaten to death has been installed at the western Kentucky school she attended.

The stone bench placed at South Todd Elementary on Monday includes a photo of Amy Dye and the dates of her birth and death.

Principal Camille Dillingham said it has been difficult for the school to cope with the death and she appreciates the donation from retired dump truck driver Mike Taylor.

"It has been a very emotional, trying time," Dillingham said. "I think it was a very nice gesture on Mr. Taylor's part."

Taylor said he held a fundraiser and received private donations to pay for the $1,700 monument after hearing about the child's death last year. Dye's adoptive brother, Garrett Dye, pleaded guilty to killing her.

A bottle of Maker's Mark bourbon is dipped in red wax during a tour of the distillery in Loretto.

Appeals court grants seal to Maker's Mark

By BRETT BARROUQUERE
The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE — A rose by any other name may smell as sweet, but an appeals court said a liquor bottle with a red dripping wax seal by any name other than Maker's Mark is illegal.

Noting that "all bourbon is whiskey, but not all whiskey is bourbon," an opinion released Wednesday by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said only the Kentucky-made bourbon can carry the distinctive bottle topper.

The decision comes in an appeal brought by London-based Diageo North America and Casa Cuervo of Mexico, which used a dripping red wax seal on special bottles of Reserva tequila. U.S. District Judge John G. Heyburn II in 2010 granted Maker's Mark's request for an injunction stopping other liquor companies from using the seal.

In a 19-page opinion affirming that decision, Judge Boyce F. Martin waxed poetic about the history of Kentucky's most famous distilled spirit. Martin, who noted at oral arguments in December "Maker's Mark is not cheap," displayed a detailed knowledge of the history and manufacture of bourbon, writing that "corn-based mash and aging in charred new oak barrels impart a distinct mellow flavor and caramel color."

"Distillers compete intensely on flavor, but also through branding and marketing; the history of bourbon, in particular, illustrates why strong branding and differentiation is important in the distilled spirits market," he wrote.

He cited bourbon brands preferred by 19th century statesmen such as Ulysses S. Grant and Daniel Webster.

The Samuels family, which created Maker's Mark in 1958, trademarked the distinctive seal in 1985. The seal, perfected by Margie Samuels in the family's deep fryer, doesn't serve any practical purpose in keeping the bottle closed.

The trademark held by Maker's Mark describes the seal as a "wax-like coating covering the cap of the bottle and trickling down the neck of the bottle in a freeform irregular pattern." The trademark application doesn't refer to a specific color, but Maker's Mark told the court it has sought to enforce the trademark only as it applied to the red dripping wax seal.

Deerfield, Ill.-based Fortune Brands, which now owns Maker's Mark, has since split its liquor business into a new company called Beam Inc.

Cuervo opted to include a dripping wax seal on bottles in 1997 as part of an effort to create an artisan look. Bottles of Reserva with the new seal entered the U.S. in 2001 in a limited production of 3,000-to-4,000 bottles. The bottles remained on sale for about three years.

Maker's Mark is bottled in Loretto in central Kentucky.

EPD launches social media presence

By SARAH BENNETT
sbennett@thenewsenterprise.com

Elizabethtown Police Department launched Facebook and Twitter accounts this week, which the department intends to use to engage with its community.

"More than anything else it's to keep people informed with what's going on in the area," said Virgil Willoughby, EPD's public information officer.

In addition to posting information about upcoming events, Willoughby said the social media sites will be used to update followers about incidents such as a wreck impeding traffic.

The department also can use the sites as aids during a criminal investigation, he said, using the example of a robbery suspect's vehicle description for what information EPD could post.

"Who knows where this leads down the road?" Willoughby said about the department's use of social media.

On Wednesday, the department had 103 followers on Facebook.

The launch of the department's social media pages was initiated by Officer Dustin Lucas, who said collecting more than 70 followers after two days of work is "astronomical."

Bryce Shumate, public information officer for Radcliff police, said the department has operated a Facebook account for two years and has received a lot of positive feedback from the community. It has 990 followers on the social media site.

In addition to newspa-

Find them:

www.facebook.com

per, radio and TV, the use of social media is one of several avenues the department uses to reach out to the community, Shumate said.

"It's just like a snowball," he said. "It builds up momentum as it goes down hill."

Shumate primarily uses it as a public relations tool as opposed to a crime fighting aid, he said, posting information about incoming severe weather and police events such as RPD's citizen police academy.

However, he added the department will post composites or drawings by its forensic artist but will direct followers to call RPD's tip line with information.

By reaching out to the community through social media, Lucas said police are engaging with a "broader spectrum of age groups."

Prison for 3 in human smuggling ring

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Three brothers accused of smuggling women from Mexico and Central America into the U.S. and forcing them into a multi-state prostitution ring have been sentenced to prison, federal prosecutors said.

Investigators said the brothers directed a dozen other men who ran brothels out of apartments and houses in Indianapolis, Michigan, Illinois and Ohio. The ring also provided women to prostitution operations in New York, Kentucky, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Missouri and Florida.

The women were forced into prostitution to pay debts to the brothers for bringing them to the U.S.

U.S. Attorney Joe Hogsett said the ring was based in Indianapolis.

Medicaid provider renegotiating another contract

The Associated Press

LEXINGTON – One of the Medicaid providers hired by the state in an effort to cut costs of providing care to poor people plans to renegotiate its contract because it's not getting enough reimbursement from the state for very ill patients.

Coventry Cares has said it wants to renegotiate agreement with Baptist Healthcare System or it will let its current contract expire Nov. 1. Baptist Healthcare has five hospitals in Lexington, Louisville, La Grange, Paducah and Corbin.

Coventry also has notified King's Daughters Medical Center in Ashland it will terminate its contract after May 26, though hospital officials say they are in talks and hope to reach an agreement to extend services.

The moves come as Coventry continues contract talks with Appalachian Regional Healthcare, which has eight hospitals in eastern Kentucky. A deadline on those talks was moved to June 30 after ARH filed a federal lawsuit against Coventry.

Baptist Healthcare spokeswoman Ruth Ann Childers said the system has agreed to talks.

"We are hopeful and optimistic and fully intend to work with Coventry in good faith on this issue," Childers said. "We don't want anybody who wants to come to the Baptist Healthcare System not to be able to do so if we can work it out at all."

Coventry spokesman Matt Eyles said there's time for the parties to reach an agreement.

"Our contract with Baptist does not expire until Nov. 1, which is over five months away," Eyles said. "We are hopeful that we can find a solution that balances member access, affordability, and quality. Instead of waiting, we thought it would be better to inform Baptist about the reality of our situation to improve the chances of a timely solution."

"Women were going back to work, they were assuming their own power. They didn't have time to sit under the dryer anymore."

same, including McPherson at Lincoln Trail Elementary School and Walker at G.C. Burkhead Elementary School.

McPherson said she thinks she and her assistants started the process for their own satisfaction but soon wanted to receive the honor for the parents, school and district.

After participating in a state evaluation, Walker realized her scores were very close to what she needed to begin the first round of the process, so she decided to pursue it.

Both teachers found the experience to be a learning process and made changes to their rooms and plans. McPherson said she learned better ways to use educational materials in her classroom, but "it helped us in all areas of our room," she said.

Walker said she, McPherson and others worked closely on the project, even driving to Ohio to a preschool supply store for materials for their rooms.

"We've called each other every night," she said.

McPherson said she felt "relief and then excitement" at learning her class was named a Classroom of Excellence.

Walker said she doesn't think the honor has registered for her yet.

"I'm sure it will sink in eventually," she said.

said, was the dedication of the military prosecution team, who "interviewed and meticulously prepared witnesses." Another key difference was Burke's interview with police, which was admitted as evidence in its entirety for the first time.

Phone calls made Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon to outgoing Commonwealth's Attorney Chris Shaw were not returned.

During the memorial service Tuesday night, the family lit paper lanterns for their loved ones, Aldridge said. State police Sgt. Matt Johnson, one of two KSP detectives who worked the case, estimated about 50 people were in attendance.

Johnson and Detective Larry Walker worked the case together from the Sept. 11, 2007, shooting. Both testified in the civilian trials in Hardin County as well as the Fort Campbell court-martial.

"This has never been about the state police," Johnson said Tuesday night. "This is about the Burke children, the Comer family and the Wilburn family."

Even though 50 were there to remember the lives of Tracy Burke and Karen Comer, at least one loved one was missing, Aldridge said. Tracy's mother, Patricia Wilburn, died earlier this year.

In a 2011 phone interview, Wilburn said, "Mom will not stop. I'm dying of emphysema, and I will fight to see him in jail before I die. If I die before then, I will come back and haunt Brent Burke."

Before her death, Wilburn had a plaque made for Walker to thank him for his dedication to the case, Aldridge said. As Tracy Burke's sons presented it to the detective Tuesday night, their grandmother was with the families in spirit, Aldridge said.

Aldridge said Burke left at 6 a.m. Wednesday to begin his sentence at the U.S. Disciplinary Barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas. There is a military appeals process, she said.

court system, Aldridge said she could not put into words how the Comer and Wilburn families felt.

"Yes, there's been a conclusion, but it certainly isn't the end of the road," she said.

There is an adoption case pending regarding the Burkes' children as well as two civil suits, one of which is a wrongful death suit in Hardin Circuit Court. The conviction potentially could make it easier to reach a favorable outcome in the civil suits, she said.

The most positive outcome, she said, is that the children are protected.

Johnson said because of the severity of the case and media attention, the Burke case has been one of KSP Post 4's larger ones.

Though the road to a conclusion was a long one, he said, they ultimately were able to navigate the obstacles and obtain some closure for the victims' families.

"We're going to do whatever it takes to get justice for the family," Johnson said.

Something's got to give

ISSUE: Elizabethtown water and sewer ratesOUR VIEW: Hit can't be avoided again

Elizabethtown Mayor Tim Walker summed it up succinctly: "We've kicked the can down the road until we've kicked it against the wall."

He was talking about Elizabethtown's publicly owned water and sewer utilities.

New wastewater projects are needed and the cash on hand slowly has evaporated over the last several years.

Consultants recommend raising water rates 60 percent and sewer rates 83 percent.

Such moves would raise minimum water bills from $8 to $12.80 and minimum sewer bills from $6 to $10 a month. For residential customers, the increases likely rate as inconveniences.

None of this is a surprise to City Council.

They've known for years the city would be required by law to add to its water treatment capabilities.

They've known for years sewer service needed improvements and upgrades.

They've also known for years that cash reserves were dwindling.

What they didn't know before 2005 is that money from the U.S. Army's Base Realignment and Closure initiative would relieve some of that burden.

They also didn't know the U.S. economy also would run headlong into a brick wall, the likes of which has not been seen since the Great Depression.

Raising rates by the proposed amounts likely would be more than an inconvenience for local industry. It could be disastrous for those already here, and weigh heavily on possible near-term economic development.

So is it the "can" of water and sewer rates up against the wall, or is it the backs of City Council?

We suggest it is both.

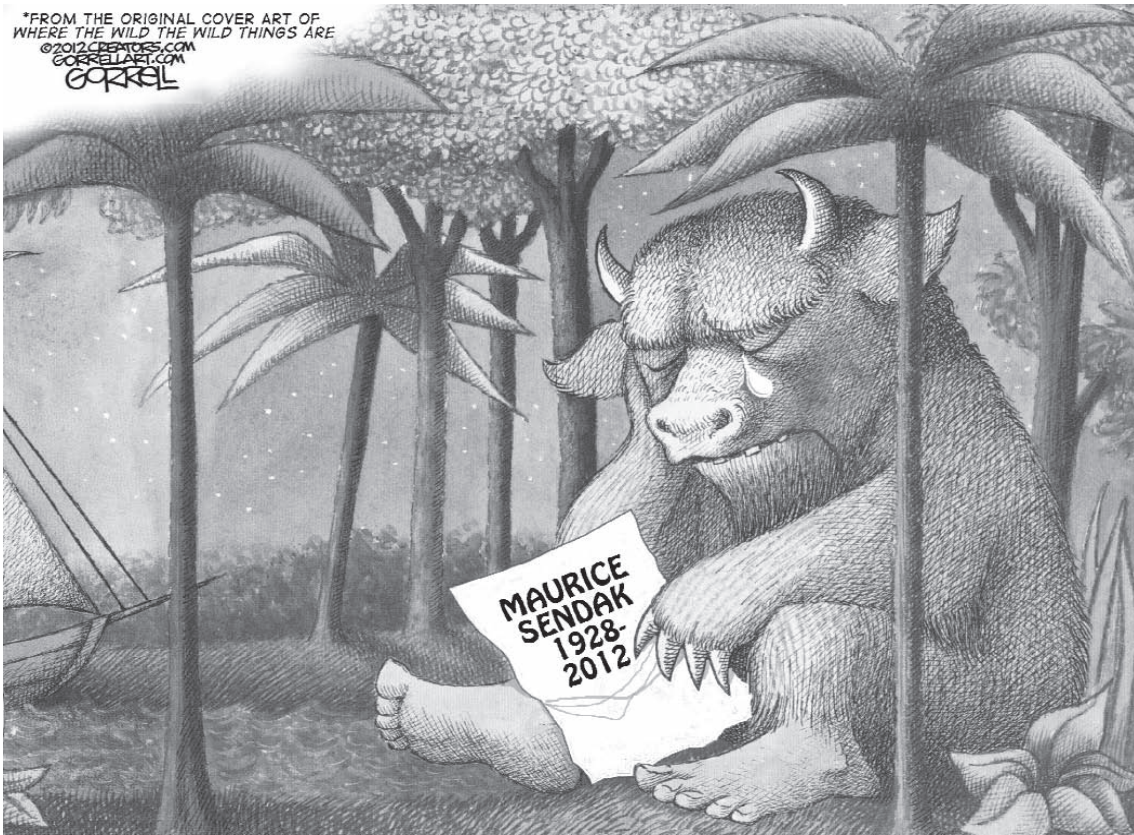

Water and sewer rates in Elizabethtown's service area have been artificially low for a very long time. Aside from small increases in 2003 and 2007, water rates have been steady for 30 years, and residents have enjoyed the benefits. Some council members likely viewed steady rates as feathers in their caps at election time.

But now it's decision time. Councilman Larry Ashlock's proposal to raise rates incrementally over a few years has some merit, but because "expert advisers" came up with the suggested rates, other experts should be consulted before attempting to kick this can again.

Because when one kicks something that's already against a wall, something is going to break – either the can or the foot – and it's going to hurt.

More foster families needed

May is National Foster Care Month, a time to come together on behalf of the nearly 6,000 Kentucky children who are living in foster care because their own families are in crisis. This month provides the opportunity to thank foster families who provide homes and love to children who need them. Foster parents often become the substitute family for the youth regardless of how long they stay – be it an hour or a lifetime.

It's important we recognize this month not only for the great things foster parents are doing, but to inspire and engage more individuals to take action to support these children. Becoming a foster parent is one of the most impactful ways to change the life of a child. Foster families open their homes and hearts, provide guidance and ensure a safe and stable environment where children can grow.

Nearly every community is suffering from a shortage of foster families.

Children in foster care feel more secure and are more likely to succeed when they are able to stay in their home community. The larger the pool of qualified foster parents in Hardin County, the easier it is to ensure that children can remain in their own neighbor-

Two events, major impact

Many thanks to Veolia and AGC Automotive Americas that sponsored Hazardous Waste Disposal Day and E-Scrap Collection Day, respectively, in April. These events would not be possible without these fine corporations' help as well as our county government that works to fund the events. Hundreds of Hardin Countians brought materials to responsibly dispose. For example, 189 vehicles were serviced in the six hours of the E-Scrap Collection Day, and hundreds more people participated on Hazardous Waste Disposal Day.

The events are a success because of Hardin Countians who take part in helping to ensure the soundness of our environment. Thank you for participating, and plan to bring hazardous materials and items such as paint, anti-freeze, oil, mercury, old computers, televisions, electronic devices like games, speakers, etc. to these events next year.

Don't forget, the Elizabethtown Police Department has a handy disposal bin for pharmaceutical drugs. Drugs should be incinerated to be disposed of responsibly.

Thank you for helping us, and the Women's Club of Elizabethtown, work to keep our environment clean.

Lincoln's vision gave rise to USDA

In the midst of a great Civil War 150 years ago, it was a Kentuckian, President Abraham Lincoln, born in a log cabin at Sinking Springs Farm in present day LaRue County, who signed legislation to establish a Department of Agriculture in order to "acquire and to diffuse among the people of the United States useful information on subjects connected with agriculture ... and to procure, propagate and distribute among the people new and valuable seeds and plants."

Armed with broad mandates, the "People's Department," as he called it, set about to serve

JOHN W. McCAULEY

American farmers and a mostly rural American landscape. At that time, almost half of all Americans lived on farms, compared with about 2 percent today. The population in 1862 was then about 31.4 million and today, that number has increased tenfold to almost 313 million people.

During the last 150 years, through the department's work on food science, agricultural research, nutrition assistance, bio-fuel production, economic and community development, natural resource conservation, international trade, credit and a host of other issues, the USDA still fulfills Abraham Lincoln's original vision – touching the lives of every American, every day in almost every way.

By any measure, it's been a very successful 150 years for USDA.

Americans benefit from safe, abundant and reasonably priced food. We produce 85 percent of what we consume and therefore enjoy food security. Our food, fuel, and fiber industries provide employment for more than 20 million Americans. Agricultural exports continue to post significant trade surpluses which, in turn, have generated almost 1 million jobs alone.

As we look to the decades ahead, USDA must continue to contribute to the strength and health of the nation by becoming a more modern and effective service provider. We must tighten our belt, just as many Americans are doing with their household budgets.

In the past few decades, American agriculture has become one of the most productive sectors of our economy, thanks to farmers, ranchers and growers adopting technology, reducing their debt, and effectively managing risk. USDA is adopting these same lessons in its Blueprint for Stronger Service, announced by Secretary Tom Vilsack earlier this year.

The Blueprint for Stronger Service aims to build a modern and efficient service organization that is closely aligned with technological innovations – and better suited to respond to 21st century agricultural challenges.

The challenges ahead are many, both for USDA and American agriculture, but by focusing on a strong safety net for farmers and ranchers, supporting policies that encourage sustainable productivity, and by promoting vibrant markets that help feed consumers at home and abroad, the "People's Department" will continue to help create jobs, support working families, strengthen rural communities, and build on the success and productivity of the America's farmers and ranchers.

John W. McCauley is the Kentucky executive director for the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Farm Service Agency.

Volunteer Suzanne Grover speaks Tuesday with patient Christina Fulton about a prescription.

CLINIC: 'I hope they get all kinds of donations'

price of what everything would cost, I don't think we would ever go to the doctor."

The clinic will celebrate its 10th anniversary of serving local communities with an open house from 1 to 5 p.m. Friday at the clinic on East Memorial Drive in Elizabethtown.

Clinic staff and volunteers began seeing patients in April 2002. The volunteer-based, nonprofit free health clinic was established to provide basic health care services to uninsured, low-income residents.

The primary sources of funding are grants and donations.

In 2000, a group of concerned residents decided to try to help those who are chronically ill and don't have access to health care, Executive Director Rebecca Farris Allen said. Two years later, the clinic treated its first patients.

Volunteers and staff members offer time and services because they're dedicated to improving the health and well-being of community members who need help, Farris Allen said.

"Everybody that's here is here because they want to be," she said.

Some community members' conditions easily could get out of control and cause them to die without the care and medicines available through the clinic, Farris Allen said.

"I think the overall desire to help people is why we're here," she said. "It's very rewarding work. The volunteers that come here, when they leave, they leave feeling better about themselves and being able to do something for someone else and they leave with smiles on their faces."

It also is good to see the support local residents and businesses have given to the clinic, Farris Allen said.

Donations always are needed because there are many people who are helped by the clinic, she said.

"It is kind of like feeding the 5,000," she said. "It's awesome."

Celebrating the clinic's 10th anniversary is exciting because operating a nonprofit service with no specific source of money is a constant struggle, Farris Allen said.

Still, the clinic continues to grow and see donors provide for needs, she said.

Farris Allen hopes the anniversary celebration draws attention to the clinic's work.

Anne Owens of Elizabethtown will be among the clinic's patients sharing testimonials Aug. 3 during the annual Taste of the Heartland fundraiser. The testimonials will share the care clinic patients have received and what it has meant to them.

She said her speech will come from her heart because of all the work and personal attention she has received from volunteers and staff members who have donated so much time to help her and other community members.

"They give me a sense of pride," she said.

Owens has received treatments, tests and medications from the clinic for about four years. She likely wouldn't know about her current medical condition or how to handle it without the clinic's help.

The things the clinic has to offer include more than medical treatment, she said.

"Very personal care, and that helped me mentally," she said. "I learned about my body. I learned about myself."

Owens doesn't like the perception people might have of patients who seek help from the clinic as people looking for free health care.

Many of the patients are working individuals who pay taxes but can't afford health care, she said.

"I'm a substitute teacher, and I give to the community," she said. "I contribute to society. However, there is no health insurance."

McMillen said he and his wife appreciate the donations that allow the clinic to do its work.

"I hope they get all kinds of donations that will put them over the top," he said. "It's amazing what they can do."

Obama voices support of gay marriage

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — On the fence no longer, President Barack Obama declared his unequivocal support for gay marriage on Wednesday, a historic announcement that gave the polarizing social issue a more prominent role in the 2012 race for the White House.

The announcement was the first by a sitting president, and Republican challenger Mitt Romney swiftly disagreed with it. "I believe that marriage is between a man and a woman," he said while campaigning in Oklahoma.

Gay rights advocates cheered Obama's declaration, which they had long urged him to make. Beyond the words, one man who married his gay partner in Washington, D.C., was stirred to send a $25 contribution to the president's campaign. "Making a contribution is the best way to say thank you," Stuart Kopperman said.

Obama revealed his decision after a series of events that made clear the political ground was shifting. He once opposed gay marriage but more recently said his views were "evolving."

and the coroner reported Davis had a history of walking difficulties.

There was no evidence of lethal trauma, and the report does not mention any illnesses.

Virgil Willoughby, Elizabethtown Police Department's public information officer, said Davis was at 3 Putt Willies when she left to go home and told her friends she would return. Davis lived near the golf course, he said.

The woman's friends became concerned after some time because Davis had not returned, Willoughby said.

When they went out to the golf course to look for her, they found Davis' golf cart and, in a nearby pond, her body, he said.

There are no pending charges, police said.

DEAR ABBY

Son deserves dressing-down for opening bedroom drawers

Dear Abby: My husband's son — I'll call him Duncan — came to visit with his family. He lived with us for about six months on and off when he was younger. During that time, he twice went through my dresser drawers without my permission. The first time, we discovered a photo of me in a negligee he had found and hidden. The second time, he said he had been looking for a key. I was furious and felt violated.

During his recent visit, it happened a third time. I discovered my underwear drawer was slightly ajar and knew Duncan had used the bathroom in our bedroom. When I told my husband, he asked me not to let it ruin the rest of their visit. I felt violated again.

After Duncan and his family left, I asked my husband if this upset him, too, and his reply was he was upset I let it bother me. I understand Duncan is his only son, but I'm hurt he's taking Duncan's side. Help. — Nervous in Nevada

■ Dear Nervous: It does appear Duncan has an unhealthy fixation on your underwear drawer, or he may be a cross-dresser. Because your husband refuses to discuss this with his son, the next time Duncan announces he's coming for a visit, offer to buy him lingerie in his size, or install a sturdy lock on your bedroom door.

AFFAIR GOODBYE. Dear Abby: I have been having an affair with "Ginger" for several years. She's married and has three kids. Ginger told me she and her husband had stopped being intimate just before we started our relationship.

Her husband caught on about a year ago. By this time Ginger and I had developed deep feelings for each other, but we agreed to stop because he had given her an ultimatum — either break it off or get out. We stopped seeing each other for a few weeks, then she called saying she had been pregnant but had gotten an abortion, and we started up again.

This time we had to carefully plan our limited time together. We continued our relationship for another eight months before it finally ended. What I'm having a problem with is Ginger ended it with no phone call — nothing. Don't you think I deserved a better goodbye? — Sitting by the Phone in Ohio

■ Dear Sitting by the Phone: Not really. While closure might have made this less frustrating for you, Ginger tried to say goodbye to you before and it didn't work. What probably happened is her husband found out the affair was ongoing and is monitoring her closely. You'll feel better once you accept Ginger has chosen him and the kids and moved on.

'TWEEN 12 &amp; 20

Pros and cons of pre-marital sex

Dr. Wallace: I'm 16 and have been an avid reader of your teen column for over 3 years, and I want to thank you for your strong stand against teens getting involved in pre-marital sex. My boyfriend and I have been together for 15 months. Things can change, but we both believe we will become husband and wife. We, like most teens, have discussed becoming sexually active, but we have agreed to remain virgins as long as we stay together. I know many of your teen readers will disagree with our views, but when it comes to remaining a virgin or becoming sexually active, the decision is a very personal one. That is why my boyfriend and I have made a list of pros and cons about teens having pre-marital sex. Here is our list:

Pros: Nothing we can think of.

Cons: 1. We could lose respect for ourselves.

2. We could disregard everything our parents have taught us.

3. I'm 16 and he is 17; however, having sex before you are married is wrong, no matter what the age.

4. We would both lose our virginity.

5. Since we go to a private Christian school, if it was found out we were having sex, we would be asked to leave.

6. If I were to become pregnant, we would both lose any sort of "social" life.

7. Our parents would be extremely disappointed and we would each face some extremely difficult decisions affecting the rest of our lives.

8. Most likely, we would lose each other and lose respect for each other.

9. Sexually-transmitted diseases are always a possibility.

I know our relationship will become stronger in the future because we both see the importance of making wise decisions. You have played a huge part in helping us develop our positive philosophy for life. Once again, I thank you. — Nameless, Crown Point, Ind.

■ Nameless: Thanks for your kind words. I'm thrilled to have played a part in your decision not to have sex before marriage. You are a very wise young lady and your future surely will reflect your wisdom and your self-respect.

PREGNANT LADIES SHOULDN'T SMOKE. Dr. Wallace: I'm 20, married and just recently found out my husband and I will become parents in about six months. We are really excited. Both of us are "only" children, so we want to have a large family. I don't drink alcohol of any kind, but I do smoke. I talked to my doctor about smoking while pregnant and the dangers it could cause the unborn child. All he said was it would be better for my health to stop smoking, but there is no definitive proof smoking could hurt the baby. Is this true? — Jillian, Philadelphia, Pa.

■ Jillian: There must be some sort of miscommunication between your doctor and you. It's difficult for me to believe a medical doctor would not believe a pregnant mother who smokes should stop smoking immediately to protect the health of the mother and the unborn child.

According to American Legacy Foundation, about 13 percent of pregnant women admit they smoke and that percentage needs to drop because smoking during pregnancy carries significant health risks and is linked to 1 in 10 infant deaths.

Former food critic promotes benefits of buying local

Chamber looks to leverage resources of Louisville Food to Table program

By MARTY FINLEY
mfinley@thenewsenterprise.com

A former food critic on Wednesday outlined a new aspect of the Hardin County Chamber of Commerce's Buy Local program on which the agency hopes to capitalize.

Sarah Fritschner, coordinator of the Louisville Farm to Table program, described the program and its advantages during the chamber's monthly luncheon at Pritchard Community Center.

The program is designed to partner local farmers with consumers in Louisville and surrounding areas by getting locally grown foods into the hands of homeowners, restaurants, workplaces and schools.

Fritschner, a former food editor at The Courier-Journal in Louisville, was placed in the position in

"It's easier to get lettuce from California than it is to get it from Hardin County to Louisville."

Sarah Fritschner
Executive Director, Coordinator
Louisville Farm to Table

2009 after a work group decided to target the $3 billion food economy in the city to combat dwindling tobacco revenues.

Fritschner said the Farm to Table program tries to increase circulation of edible local food products in the economy while increasing the capacity of farmers who produce the products.

Brad Richardson, director of the Hardin County Chamber of Commerce, said the chamber is looking to tap into the program's resources. If local farmers generate products that are sold in Louisville, the money will circulated back into Hardin County, he said.

"We want to be able to leverage what she does for Metro Louisville," he said to the crowd.

The chamber has eagerly promoted its own buy-local program as a way to keep money in the county's economy, which in turn could generate more jobs.

Fritschner said there is room for innovation in the food economy because big businesses are not looking to change the way they do business, leaving room for "little guys" to move in and make an impact.

Fritschner said the program has been successful in partnering farmers with restaurants and Jefferson County Public Schools has invested more than $200,000 in local products for the 2012 growing season.

The program also is working with the University of Louisville to bring more local food on campus and working to put local foods into the hands of "non-white table cloth restaurants" so people who cannot afford fine dining can enjoy local food, she said.

However, the bread and butter of the program is wholesale purchases, which make up about 99 percent of the program's sales, she said.

Fritschner admitted there still are barriers to the program, including cleaning, storing, packaging foods, distribution and processing local foods.

"It's easier to get lettuce from California than it is to get it from Hardin County to Louisville," she said.

But Fritschner said the program is vigilant about finding solutions to counteract these deterrents.

"We're working on these issues all the time," she said.

Fritschner encouraged those in attendance to buy local whenever they can because it helps bolster the economy.

"If you put one dollar in, you get many more dollars out when you buy local," she said.

Company cools Leitchfield job woes

New York Blower Co. purchases building to create 125 jobs

By DEANNA LASLEY
Landmark News Service

Another 125 jobs are coming to Leitchfield's industrial base.

The New York Blower Co., a manufacturer of commercial fans since 1889, purchased the Trim Masters building. The deal, made through the local industrial development office and the city of Leitchfield, was official as of May 3, said Mayor William H. Thomason at Monday's council meeting.

The company makes industrial and commercial fans and blowers to move air for various commercial purposes including high capacity fans, clean air centrifugal and axial fans, propellers, roof ventilators and duct fans.

The plant moved to La Porte, Ind., in 1919, where the majority of the business remains today. The company began with J.W. and August Mathis as the Mathis Brothers Co. in 1889 in Chicago.

The brothers bought out New York Blowers in 1894.

Today the company has several subsidiaries such as Mechanovent, TLT-Babcock, Alphair Ventilating Systems and MAS Air Systems.

To entice the company to Leitchfield, the city will exclude the factory from ad valorem taxes for up to five years and will pay the corporation $1,000 for each of the first 100 employees hired within the first 60 months of operations.

Gov. Steve Beshear and NYB representatives will make an announcement later in the month or early in June, Thomason said.

Trim Masters Inc., is still using the Leitchfield location for piece work with just a handful of employees. There will be a transition before the new industry will settle into the building, a spokesman for Leitchfield/Grayson County Industrial Foundation said.

DEBT ADVISER

Get to the bottom of mysterious debt

Dear Debt Adviser: When trying to open a checking account, my husband and I were made aware of a past debt that is being reported to an outfit with a name that sounds like a credit bureau. But nothing is listed on our credit report. This debt is from at least 2006, and when I was contacted about it, I asked multiple times to have the details of the debt sent to me in writing. We have yet to receive anything in writing. We have even been told twice that we must go to the nearest branch of a large national bank, which is three hours away. When we opened this account, it was online. Now, when I try to contact the bank to get the matter settled, I am unable to reach anyone who knows anything about the old debt.

My question: Do I drive three hours to the local branch and get the requested information via printout? If we can get someone on the phone, do we offer to "settle" on the debt? We are relocating in the next eight months and we want to be able to open a checking account and qualify for a mortgage in our new state without any issues. Do I begin a dispute with the credit bureau? Please offer any suggestions on putting this behind us. — Candice may think. I have known many people who left a small, old debt unpaid because the company they owed it to was too difficult to deal with, the debt was too small to bother with or they just thought it would go away. Most debts don't go anywhere but up. Debts do not improve with age.

■ Dear Candice: Your debt is old enough to be in school. Let's get it taken care of before it's old enough to vote.

This is less unusual than you

You are dealing not with a credit bureau but with a debt-collection company. Although it is getting in the way of your opening a checking account, don't confuse it with a checking-account-reporting bureau like Checkrite, Chex-Systems, FIS, SCAN or Tele-Check. These are known as specialty reporting agencies and are subject to the same reporting and dispute rules as the three big credit bureaus.

You are dealing with a collector, not a reporting agency. All debt collectors must provide you with debt verification, including the amount owed and the creditor's name. If you dispute the debt in writing within 30 days of first being contacted, the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act requires the collector to stop collection of the debt until it obtains verification of the debt or gets a copy of any judgment, or the name and address of the original creditor. A copy of such verification or judgment must be sent to you. Under the FDCPA, the collector also must tell you what you owe and to whom you owe it. If the collector doesn't, you can sue.

To get to the bottom of this debt, I suggest you start by contacting the bank that would not allow you to open a checking account. Request that it provide you with the correct contact information on the company that provided the negative information regarding your old debt. You are entitled to view the same report that any bank reviewed in the course of making a decision to deny you an account.

If the debt doesn't show up on one credit report, get copies of all three. They often contain different information. If these all turn up empty, seek copies of reports from the specialty checking bureaus I listed above.

Once you find out to whom you owe the debt, contact him or her to get more information on what you owe. Ask to speak to a supervisor if the person you initially speak with is unable to help you. If you find that you do owe an old debt, pay it off or make arrangements to pay over time, if necessary.

Postal Service: Will keep rural post offices open

The struggling U.S. Postal Service is trying to tamp down concern over its wide-scale cuts, saying it will seek to keep hundreds of rural post offices open with shorter hours.

Postmaster General Patrick Donahoe told a news conference the new plan will save the mail agency half a billion dollars each year while addressing concerns of rural residents most opposed to post office closings.

Previously, up to 3,700 low-revenue post offices were slated for closure or consolidation beginning sometime after May 15, many in rural areas. It was part of a multibillion-dollar postal cost-cutting effort to stave off the agency's bankruptcy.

The Postal Service plans to seek regulatory approval for the new plan and get community input.

U.S. STOCKS FALL AS EUROPE DOUBTS BUBBLE TO SURFACE. Fear of European debt is once again playing havoc with Wall Street.

Stocks pitched down Wednesday in the United States as borrowing rates climbed for Spain and Italy, a sign that investors are losing confidence in those countries' finances.

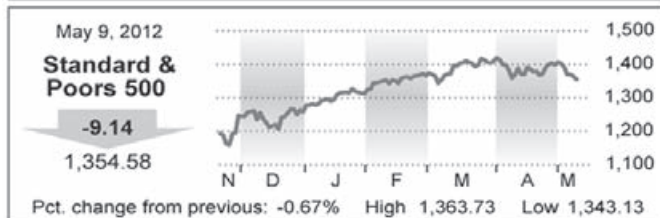

Spain's 10-year borrowing rate leapt to 6.06 percent from 5.70 percent early Tuesday. Many fear that Spain, strangled by high unemployment and a real estate collapse, could be the next nation to require financial rescue.

Zac Efron as Logan and Riley Thomas Stewart as Ben in Warner Bros. Pictures' and Village Roadshow Pictures' romantic drama "The Lucky One," a Warner Bros. Pictures release. Below, Efron and Taylor Schilling.

The unlucky one

It's Sparks-tastic

By BECCA OWSLEY
bowsley@thenewsenterprise.com

In "The Lucky One," Zac Efron ("New Year's Eve") plays a U.S. Marine named Logan who comes across what could be a life-saving good luck charm — a mysterious photo of a woman.

When his third tour of duty ends he returns to the United States. Not really knowing what to do with himself, Logan goes on a quest with Zeus, his German Shepherd to find the woman in the photo.

Because this is based on a Nicholas Sparks book, ("The Notebook," "Dear John") you can guess two things right off. When Logan finds the woman, she is living by water and the story centers on grief and death.

Sparks really needs to add variety to his writing. Sure, the characters and situations change but the stories usually build from two main components — water and death.

His endings are a strange version of a tragic happily ever after.

Maybe next time he can create a romance that takes place in the desert where no one dies. At least it would be something different.

The film has two bright spots. The child, Riley Thomas Stewart, who is famous for his Toyota Highlander commercial campaign, and Zeus, played by Rowdy, a 6-year-old German Shepherd.

Their performances outshine the rest of the cast.

Dogs play a central role in the film because the main character owns a kennel.

While predictably Sparks, the story is sweet but the main actors aren't moving enough to pull it off.

Efron isn't exactly convincing as a Marine, but he somewhat pulls off the sweet protective drifter aspects of his character. His acting skills lack the depth needed for this type of role.

His love interest, played by Taylor Schilling (TV's "Mercy") looks unnatural on screen. There are scenes that are supposed to be deeply moving as she becomes overwhelmed in grief. Schilling's performance does not convey these emotions and her acting appears forced.

The secret to acting is to make it look like you are not acting. It's a secret that needs to be shared with Schilling. Her performance almost kills the film.

Blythe Danner ("Little Fockers") plays Schilling's grandmother who encourages the relationship with Logan.

Parents of preteen girls who want to see the film because of Efron's teen idol status might want to know there are several sexy scenes.

If the movie featured actors with better chops this could have been a nice, although predictable, love story. Instead I was left with melodramatic mush.

Watch the movie for the dogs but know you could be frustrated with the humans.

Joan Shelly and Daniel Martin Moore release a duet CD.

Elizabethtown native releases CD

The News-Enterprise

"Farthest Field," a new CD from Daniel Martin Moore, was released Tuesday.

Daniel Martin Moore was born in Elizabethtown and still has family in the area.

His new album is a duet project with Joan Shelly and has many of the same traits as the ancient Chinese poems Moore admires.

He likes the poems' sense of deep stillness and reverence, themes of travel and homesickness as well as matching landscapes with mood.

The album was "inspired by 'Trawlerman's Song' by Vashti Bunyan and Robert Lewis," Moore said in a news release.

"Joanie and I worked up a version of it for a tour we did last summer and we loved singing it," he said. "We got so much positive feedback from it we started thinking of other songs we might like to do and over time the idea for this record came to be."

The album is released through Ol Kentuck Recordings, a label Moore established in 2011.

While no local performances are scheduled, there are two opportunities to hear his music Friday in Kentucky. There is an in-studio performance at noon at WFPK in Louisville and another at 7 p.m. at CD Central in Lexington.

Louisville author featured at Radcliff book signing

The News-Enterprise

Louisville resident and author Lori A. Moore will sign copies of her book "Missing Andy: The Journey from Grief to Joy" on Saturday in Radcliff.

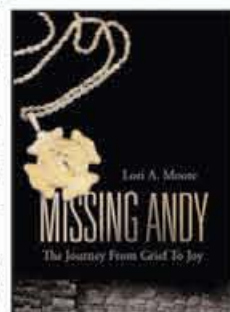

In her book, Moore deals with how to view the loss of a loved one. She lost her husband to a fatal blood clot.

In a news release she said she worked her way through the five stages of grief and brought herself from numbness to happiness.

She now writes to help others come through grief to a place of understanding and acceptance.

She explains the journey that improved her relationship with God and showed her how to live again through her faith in Jesus.

She will sign books during the Every Woman's Arts and Crafts Festival, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday at Colvin Community Center located at 230 Freedom Way in Radcliff.

A perfect Mother's Day

I've made a Mother's Day break through.

Last year, the fourth Mother's Day since I brought my first sweet child into this world, I figured out exactly how to celebrate.

Gifts aren't a part of it. No mother worth her salt really wants gifts. Now, kid gifts are great — the hand-made or hand-painted things, anything with a hand or footprint squished into it, even my last birthday gift, a hot pink Angry Birds T-shirt from the junior's department at Kohl's. Just a few sizes too small.

"We picked it out all by ourselves," my 2- and 4-year-olds cheered.

But still, moms can do without gifts. Time off from motherhood isn't part of it. Yeah, I'm screaming for a break every now and then. Working full time and mothering two preschoolers is exhausting, and anyone who says otherwise is cheating by hiring a housekeeper or living down the street from her mother.

I've heard of women sending their families away for the day, but a break from the kids isn't the answer. Anyway, if I found myself alone on a Sunday afternoon, I'd probably let it tick away while I did something ridiculous, maybe attack some grout with a toothbrush or sort outgrown baby clothes.

My break through was realizing I just wanted a break from everything but blissful motherhood. I wanted a break from obligation, compromise and annoyance. Any source of possible stress was banned. The day's new meaning was to enjoy all the good pieces of being a mommy and not to suffer any of the bad.

It was Mom's choice all day. That meant going out to breakfast and then spending the day marveling at my mini muffin kids.

Of course, they needed to be pleasant boys for this to work so we went to the zoo. The boys, my husband and I spent the day just being happy, wandering from animal to animal with no place else to be, no one else to answer to. And because it was Mother's Day, I didn't carry anything, didn't take anyone to the bathroom and if we had a runner it was my husband's job to bring the kid back.

At the end of the day, I lounged in the back yard while my husband made dinner. It was the best day.

The trickiest part might be that you must cut your own mother out of Mother's Day. For me, hauling the kids two hours north is a source of stress. Planning exactly what the six different mothers in my extended family — each one wanting to be the boss of everybody — want to do is impossible and, therefore, a source of stress. Can't have it.

I'm lucky, through. My mother gets it. Maybe this kind of selfishness isn't for everyone. But if a mother's Mother's Day traditions aren't doing it for her, this is the one holiday she might have enough leeway to try something new.

Taking a walk on the Wilder side

'Willy Wonka & the Chocolate Factory' set for this weekend at Historic State Theater

By BECCA OWSLEY
bowsley@thenewsenterprise.com

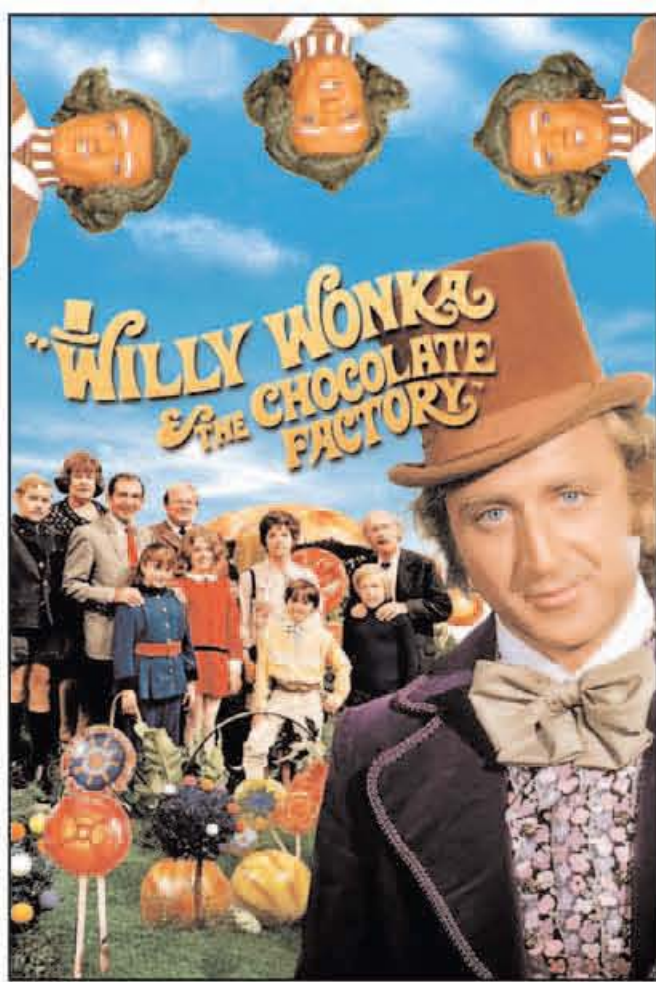

Candy, kids and Oompa-Loompas will fill the Historic State Theater this weekend with a showing of "Willy Wonka & the Chocolate Factory."

The 1971 film stars Gene Wilder as candy factory genius Wonka and Peter Ostrum and Jack Albertson as Charlie Bucket and Grandpa Joe.

According to Internet Movie Database there were a variety of ideas for casting the film before landing on Wilder and other cast members. Joel Grey was the first choice for Wonka but wasn't physically imposing enough. Jon Pertwee turned down the role because of his role as the third Doctor on "Doctor Who" and all six members of Monty Python expressed interest in the film but were told they weren't the big names needed for an international audience at the time.

Jean Stapleton was asked to play Mike Tee-vee's mother but turned down the part because she was filming a pilot for a new television show. That show turned out to be "All in the Family."

The film didn't do well when it was released in theaters but with the introduction to movie rentals in the 1980s, it became one of the decade's most popular movies.

If you get hungry for chocolate watching the film, know this: Most of the chocolate bars used in the film were made of wood.

The film was made before computer generated effects were possible but filmmakers needed to turn the character Violet blue in one scene. IMDB reported that a color layering process was used for the effect. While the book called for her hair and face to turn blue the effect only allowed the director to turn her face blue. The layering effect was later improved and used for the light sabers in "Star Wars."

For the State Theater

showing, a chocolate river will lead up to the doors of the theater to replicate the inside of the factory. Life-sized suckers will be placed in faux grass along the chocolate river.

Willy Wonka also will be there and the Wonka brand of candy will be sold at the concession stand. One Wonka prize will be given away at each showing.

"Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory" shows at 7 p.m. Friday and 2 and 7 p.m. Saturday. Tickets are $5.

Elizabethtown residents bring Iraqi poetry to U.S. eyes

Howell, Qaisi to read Saturday at Barnes & Noble in Elizabethtown

By BECCA OWSLEY
bowsley@thenewsenterprise.com

Elizabethtown native Rebecca Gayle Howell is a poet and translator recently involved in a poetry collection that has gained national attention.

Along with Husam Qaisi, another Elizabethtown resident, Howell translated "Hagar Before the Occupation/Hagar After the Occupation" by Amal al-Jubouri. Their work was nominated for the national Best Translated Book Award this year.

Howell and Qaisi will be at Barnes and Nobel Booksellers in Elizabethtown from 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday for bi-lingual readings from the collection.

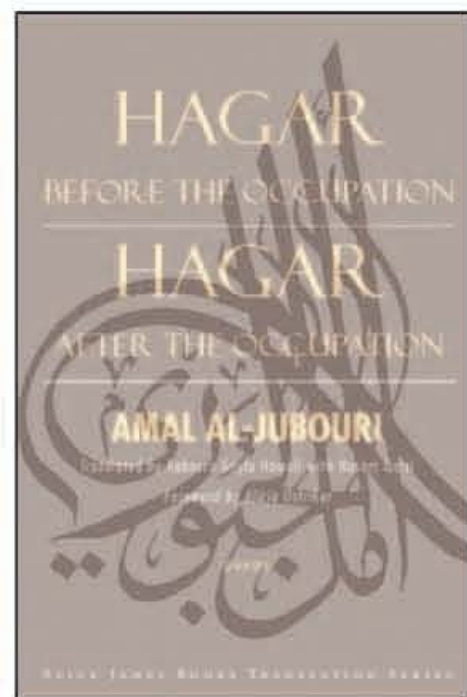

Howell has been lifelong friends with Qaisi's wife, Vemihan, and chose him as a collaborator because of their friendship. She also feels she owes her former English teachers a debt of gratitude for her success as a poet.

The collection is an Iraqi woman's poetry memoir of the war.

"I think poetry, and perhaps especially poetry in translation, brings understanding and empathy to the reader — precisely because these forms ask us to imagine someone else's life," Howell said.

She feels society puts off hearing from those writing and living in the world's war zones, opting to wait a generation or more to translate them into English.

"When I went looking for an Iraqi poet who could speak to what the world was going through, I found Amal al-Jubouri," Howell said. "She was a renegade journalist who'd been living in exile in Germany and, after the Baath Party fell, she was safe to return to her home."

Al-Jubouri lived in Baghdad during the war.

Howell stressed that she doesn't feel the story is an anti-American story but rather the story of a woman's grief and coming home to discover what "true exile" is.

"Her story is an elegy," Howell said. When Howell worked on the translations with Qaisi she couldn't believe how the poems doubled in meaning once they were translated into English.

"So many of them served the American experience as much as they served the Iraqi experience," she said. "Unfortunately, there is never just one side of a war, we share the suffering."

This project taught her the lesson that all can share the healing and be better for it, she said.

5TH REGION TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Going for seven
straightBy JOSH CLAYWELL
jclaywell@thenewsenterprise.com

With 11 No. 1 seeds and one gold medal already earned for tonight's Class 2-A, Region 2 meet, the Elizabethtown Lady Panthers seem like a shoo-in to win their seventh straight title.

Longtime Elizabethtown coach Dickie Jones, however, doesn't exactly look at things like that.

He knows the Lady Panthers will have their work cut out for them at Central Hardin beginning at 5:30. Running events start at 6.

"There are a lot of good teams in the region," Jones said Wednesday. "We can't underestimate anyone in the region. Warren East is solid, South Warren has really done well this year and LaRue County has been coming on lately. I don't think we can overlook anyone."

Elizabethtown senior Jessica Gabhart said that's not going to be an issue.

"We've got strong people in multiple events and some strong relays," she said. "Field events are a little weaker than last year, but we can round up points in other events that should help us get lucky number seven."

Elizabethtown's defense got off to a solid start Wednesday afternoon as Gabhart and freshman teammate Whitney Danbury finished first and third in the pole vault to give the Lady Panthers an eight-point cushion over Warren East.

The pole vault was held at Elizabethtown because Central Hardin's pit failed a mandatory pre-meet inspection.

Gabhart said winning their seventh region crown will give the Lady Panthers a big boost going into next week's state meet at the University of Louisville and in the future.

"Seven will be a big accomplishment for our team. And it will get the rest of the team excited for their next couple of years on the team," she said. "Winning number three in my first year on the varsity squad was encouragement for us to keep winning. We have a tradition to uphold that we can't let down."

Elizabethtown, which is ranked 11th in 2-A, is seeded first in every relay.

It's All In The Family

Daughter joins mother as singles champ, while sisters take doubles title

By JOHN GROTH
jgroth@thenewsenterprise.com

It's finally AnnLauren Fiepke's time. After two years of finishing 5th Region Tennis Tournament runner-up, the top-seeded Elizabethtown senior girls' singles player captured that coveted title.

It was a humbling experience, especially since there was so much family history involved.

AnnLauren Fiepke defeated her second-seeded sophomore sister Natalie Fiepke, 6-1, 6-2 in Wednesday's title match at University Drive Park in Elizabethtown.

Just like in last month's Lincoln Heritage Conference Tournament, older sister took knocked off younger sister in straight sets again to capture the championship.

But this one had a little more at stake. This one was to add to the family's region title honors. AnnLauren netted it, giving the Fiepkes four total. She joined their mother, Kristin, who won three consecutive region tournaments from 1979-81 before playing for the University of Kentucky.

Marion County

Dejected. Frustrated. Sickened. Disappointed. Those are the kind of emotions three Elizabethtown seniors felt after Wednesday's 5th Region Boys' Tennis Tournament championships at University Drive Park in Elizabethtown.

Second-seeded Reza Haider couldn't capitalize on a couple of first-set set points and suffered a 7-6 (7-5), 6-4 loss to top-seeded Marion County freshman Alex Spalding in the singles title match.

It was just as disheartening a day for Bilal Ahmed and Zeeshan Bhatti. The top-seeded doubles team was bummed as Marion County's second-seeded senior team of Jacob Burdette and Noah Swencki rallied for a 6-7 (2-7), 6-3, 6-1 victory to defend their crown.

Thanks to their thrilling win, the Knights rallied to win the team title – ending the Panthers' two-year reign.

Casteel tags record nine-bearded turkey

Hardin County ranks third statewide for turkey harvest

By PAT CARDIN
For The News-Enterprise

It's no secret the Casteel family loves to hunt. All four boys in the family have names related to the outdoors. When it comes time to take two of them hunting on opening day of the statewide turkey season, dad Andy has to have the boys draw straws to see who gets to shoot first. As it turned out, Coleman drew the longer straw over Hunter and earned the chance.

Opening morning, Andy and the boys were in a blind Andy thought would have three gobblers come to them off the roost. He had been scouting and was seeing three gobblers, five hens and six jakes together. Waiting for daylight, they heard their first gobbler at 6:30 a.m. but it was a lone turkey and they didn't hear what they expected to be two others. The hens flew down, the gobbler flew down and Andy put out a Pretty Boy decoy with a breeding hen decoy. Once the gobbler saw the decoys, he came in on a run.

Andy hoped to have a double with three turkeys coming in but only the one showed up. Five-year-old Coleman whispered to his 6-year-old brother Hunter to go ahead and shoot the gobbler. Hunter had to go to school Monday and Coleman said he and Andy could hunt more during the week. So he was giving up his turn to shoot so his older brother could take the gobbler coming in.

Pretty dog-gone mature for their age to be so unselfish.

As it turns out, Hunter took the gobbler that had nine beards, totaling 77 inches. Using the National Wild Turkey Federation scoring system, he scored 196 1/8 points. The turkey ended up weighing 21 pounds, 8 ounces with one spur being an inch long and the other 1 1/8 inches.

Andy had just purchased 20 gauge pumps with a red-dot scope for the boys. He barely got them sighted the day before the season began and was cutting it close on being ready for opening day. This was the first turkey for Hunter but he took a monster buck when he was 4.

When he saw the turkey, he thought it was a gobbler with a 6- or 7-inch beard. To him, it was just another gobbler and he had no idea about all the beards until he got to the gobbler and started counting them.

Wednesday didn't have the feel of a normal 17th District softball game.

As such, the defenses didn't feel the need to show up, either.

Traveling to John Hardin for the third – and hopefully, final – time this season to try to take on the Lady Bulldogs, 14th-ranked Central Hardin finished with seven errors and John Hardin made nine more as the Lady Bruins eventually emerged with a 15-2 win in five ugly innings.

The game was originally slated for April 19, but the Lady Bulldogs chose not to play – with Central Hardin already in uniform and warming up at the complex – following the sudden resignation of coach Corey Yates less than two hours before the game.

The teams tried playing again early last week and made a little more progress. Central Hardin led 8-1 and was batting with one out in the top of the third before storms and field conditions suspended the game.

They resumed at 5:15 p.m. Wednesday and needed more than an hour to complete the final two-plus innings.

"It's hard to come back in the middle of a game already being down 8-1 and trying to play," said interim John Hardin coach Brittany Glascock. "When you only play a little more than two innings, by the time you get warmed up and get in a groove, the game's already over."

But at least the problem-plagued game is indeed finally over.

Central Hardin (21-8 overall, 8-0 district) capped off its second straight unbeaten regular season against district foes, but the lackadaisical defense loomed over the Lady Bruins.

"He (Central Hardin coach Jamie Goodman) did mention our errors," said Central Hardin junior Jordan Lasley, who went 3-for-5 with three runs and two RBIs. "We just need to make the routine plays and get the runners out."

The Lady Bruins opened the bottom of the third by making five errors in a three-batter span. It started with a bad throw and poor dig on an infield grounder hit by senior Catherine Greenwell and that was followed up by another bad throw and poor dig – and bad outfield back-up – on a pickoff at first base

Votto's RBI double lifts Reds past Brewers, 2-1

By CHRIS JENKINS
AP Sports Writer

MILWAUKEE – Johnny Cueto showed he could hold his own in a duel with one of baseball's toughest pitchers at home, Zack Greinke.

Joey Votto and the Cincinnati Reds then found a way to give manager Dusty Baker a milestone victory.

Votto's RBI double off John Axford broke a scoreless tie in the ninth and the Reds edged the Milwaukee Brewers, 2-1 on Wednesday.

"Zack is always a handful," Votto said. "John Axford is a very good pitcher in his own right, and then we stole one from him. I don't want to use the word surprising, but it's great whenever you can sneak out a win against those two pitchers."

The Reds won 2-of-3 against the struggling Brewers, leaving Baker with 1,500 victories as a major league manager.

"Every time you win something, it means something," Baker said. "They came and told me that I won my 1,400th here. Now my 1,500th here. Who knows? Maybe I'll win my 2,000th here. If I'm around that long."

Drew Stubbs singled off Axford with two outs, and Votto lined a ball over the glove of second baseman Rickie Weeks to score Stubbs from first.

"Drew always has a chance to score," Votto said. "He's such a good runner. He's probably one of the game's best runners."

Brewers manager Ron Roenicke said he didn't have a clear view of the play as it developed, but he wasn't happy with the result.

"I don't think a guy should be able to score from first base," Roenicke said.

Brandon Phillips then hit a bloop single, driving in Votto for a 2-0 lead.

Ryan Braun connected against Sean Marshall in the bottom of the ninth, trimming the Reds' lead to one with his 10th homer. Marshall nearly gave up another homer on a long fly ball by Corey Hart that was caught at the wall in center, then allowed a pair of two-out singles to Jonathan Lucroy and Norichika Aoki.

Hart beats Knox

The News-Enterprise

Trailing 3-2, the visiting Hart County Raiders erupted for seven runs in the sixth inning and tacked on three in the seventh to top 5th Region foe Fort Knox, 12-3 on Wednesday.

Fort Knox (3-22) lost its ninth straight, while Hart County (10-19) beat the Eagles for the second time this season and snapped a four-game losing skid. The Raiders won 9-8 in eight innings in Munfordville on April 12.

Senior Trevor Rice had an RBI double for the Eagles, while senior Matt Hubner had three singles and freshman Matt Borowski hit two singles.

Fort Knox allowed 10 or more runs for the fifth straight game.

PREP TENNIS: 5TH REGION TOURNAMENT

E'TOWN: Snow sisters, AnnLauren Fiepkke win region championships

"I've been wanting region for awhile," AnnLauren said. "It hasn't probably hit me yet just because it's been so quick this tournament it seems, having a bye the first round. Yeah, I'm really excited."

They helped Elizabethtown capture the girls' team title Tuesday and, along with the top-seeded doubles team of junior Mary-Chapin Snow and freshman Mackenzie Snow, added two more points to the Lady Panthers' total. Elizabethtown finished with the 18-point maximum to outdistance runner-up Central Hardin, which had seven points. The Lady Panthers advanced to the team sectional, which will be played Friday in Elizabethtown or Saturday in Louisville.

They hope the wind won't be as much of a factor as it was Wednesday.

AnnLauren acknowledged she struggled with her backhand and the wind frustrated her. She held 2-1 leads in both sets before pulling away – and credited her calm attitude for it.

"I didn't hit my serve like I had been. The wind was pretty bad today actually. She (Natalie) hits more flat and I think that hurt her somewhat. The wind hurts anyone even if I have a little more top-spin than her," AnnLauren said. "I just try to go out there and not feel like I had it, because I was really nervous."

But the wind aggravated Natalie even more, sending her serves into the net and also her ground shots down. She had trouble holding her left arm through shots, too.

After the match ended, the sisters met each other at the net and shared a hug. This time, though, Natalie was ready and opened her arms first.

And she vowed to spend the next week improving her mistakes.

"I'm going to be out here a lot practicing and try to fix what I messed up on because I can't play like that at State," Natalie said. "There's no chance if I play like that. Neither of us."

Mary-Chapin Snow knows exactly how AnnLauren felt. She's been runner-up two straight years in the region doubles tournament until she teamed with her sister to earn a 6-3, 4-6, 6-3 victory over their fourth-seeded junior teammates Sydney Davis and Lauren Riney.

"It feels good to finally call myself a region champ instead of runner-up," Mary-Chapin said with a laugh. "We've worked really hard all year, just mainly for region and all that hard work paid off."

Despite having played until 10:30 Tuesday night, Davis and Riney put up one major fight.

Coach Karen Henson said it was the best they've played all season.

Just like in the conference tournament final against Central Hardin seniors Alli King and Ashley Thomas, the Snows needed three sets to pull out the title and took advantage of the 10-minute break before the third. It's done wonders for them.

"(We get a chance to) clear our head, forget those last two sets and focus on the next one," Mary-Chapin said.

"Exactly," added Mackenzie.

MARION: beats Panthers for team title by one point

Marion County finished with 13 points, beating Elizabethtown by one to advance to Saturday's team sectional.

"Tomorrow is a new day. We get eight hours of sleep and it's a whole new challenge that we face. We've got State, we're going to play in Lexington, we're going to make a run and hopefully we do the best we can. Whatever happens there happens there, as well," Ahmed said. "It's a sad end to our region career. That's how life is."

It was a rough day for the Panthers, indeed.

One day after putting on an exciting rally to defeat third-seeded Central Hardin junior Tad Skaggs, Haider didn't have his game exactly on target. And his passionate yells turned to angry ones.

Haider went back-and-forth with Spalding the entire match. Leading 6-5, he had two chances to close the first set out – but missed both. Spalding came back as he forced a tiebreaker, which he evened at five before recording the final two points to win the set. Haider tried rallying in the second set to no avail.

"I just missed easy shots," he said. "I had set points. I had set points, two of them in the first set, and then in the second set, I'd get up and I'd gain points and just wouldn't get them."

It marked Spalding's second victory over Haider this season. He was concerned with Haider's volleys, but handled them with lobs.

"(I was) playing consistent," Spalding said. "I hit it to his backhand."

Haider took the loss hard. After shaking hands with Spalding, Haider walked over to the bench and covered his head with his hands. He spent 5 minutes there before his younger brother, sophomore Hassan, came and consoled him.

Bhatti thought he and Ahmed let one slip away because of their inexperience, especially in third sets. This is the first year they've been doubles partners and they'd played in only one three-set match this year – but it was a super-tiebreaker against Louisville Male.

After coming back to tie the match up, Burdette and Swencki won five straight games to take control in the third set. Despite only being paired together a week before the region tournament, they repeated as champs.

They've played together since seventh grade and acknowledged their experience from playing in the region tournament together before and in three three-set matches last year helped.

"It's awesome. It feels good," Burdette said. "It's a definite confidence booster for State. It's huge."

For Bhatti and Ahmed, it was a new, but sad, experience.

"I think the third set they had momentum. They're more experienced than we are and have been playing for a long time," Ahmed said. "We just weren't used to the situation where you have to play a third set because most of the scores we've had this year have been pretty dominant. ... It was really different."

Population models help biologists manage deer herds

By ART LANDER JR.
Kentucky Afield Magazine

FRANKFORT — Population models help biologists manage deer herds.

“Models enable deer managers to input information to track population trends,” said Tina Brunjes, deer and elk program coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. “The two basic questions are: how many deer were born and how many died.”

Models are objective, mathematical indicators of populations. They provide herd managers with a better understanding of the factors that cause a population to increase or decrease.

“When you boil it down, you have to know what’s driving the population,” Brunjes said. “You need to factor in the birth rate, weather, quality of habitat and mortality; be it from hunting, or compensatory mortality such as accidents, disease, coyote predation of fawns, or vehicle/deer collisions.”

Before computers, deer managers used pens, paper and calculators to compute statistics on deer herds. Today, they use spreadsheets.

Kentucky’s deer herd is managed on a county level, so there are 120 sets of data to be analyzed each year after the close of hunting in January.

“Population models need a large data set to be effective,” Brunjes said. “They are used for large, landscape level monitoring, but are not suited for 1,000-acre deer leases.”

A good model detects population trends quickly, after factoring in all the intangibles, which includes crop damage complaints, deer/vehicle collisions and the number of landowners or hunters expressing concerns about deer numbers.

“Our population model gives us an estimate of deer per square mile,” Brunjes said. “From that number, we have a pretty good idea if the population density is over, under or on target, based on the county’s zone status.”

An understanding of the impact of many factors is needed to recommend season lengths and bag limits.

In 1986, after evaluating several computerized deer population simulation programs, Kentucky deer managers selected the program Deer Camp, which used harvest data from previous seasons to generate estimates of the number of deer that would be present in a county when the next season opened.

Deer Camp is one of several deer population models that have been used in recent decades by deer managers across the country. Wisconsin, for example, has used the SAK (Sex-Age-Kill) deer population model since the 1960s.

CASTEEL: takes turkey with nine beards

Coleman wound up taking a jake for the season and probably somewhere down the line will remind Hunter that he gave up his shot, but it is all in the family and Andy is proud of both boys.

Hunter took his gobbler in Hardin County and helped set a new record for the most turkey harvested in a spring season. When the state harvest record was broken in 2010, Hardin County saw 724 birds taken. As of Tuesday night, Hardin County set a record of 750 turkeys, with 740 being gobblers and 10 bearded hens.

The state harvest did better than last year by 863 birds. In 2011, the total was 32,191. This year, 33,054 have been checked in through Telecheck. That is still below the all-time high in 2010 when the state total was 36,097.

The top county for 2012 is Logan County with 791 birds followed by Muhlenberg with 764 and then Hardin. Breckinridge County is fourth in the state with 638 followed by Grayson in fifth with 620 and Hart drops from No. 1 last year to sixth with 608. If you look at the region of Breckinridge, Hardin, Grayson and Hart counties, some of the best turkey hunting in the state is without a doubt in this area. The counties totaled 2,616 birds. Hardin, Grayson and Hart have been in the top 10 the last couple of years.

Other local counties of interest are LaRue with 265 and Meade at 275.

Statewide totals are available online at the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife’s website, fw.ky.gov.

Wiping out hard water stains

Dear Heloise: Last year, we had a new well put in, and now we have been having problems with hard water stains in sinks, toilets and the shower. Please advise on how I can remove the stains. Thanks. — Sandra S. in Michigan

■ Hi, Sandra, and thanks for writing. If the “stains” are orange or look like rust, then they probably are from iron in the water. These will need to be treated with a commercial rust remover.

However, if the stains are from hard water, then just plain old white or apple-cider vinegar should work. You can heat it (not boiling) and pour it in a sink that has a stopper plugging the drain. Let it sit for an hour or so, then scrub.

You can do the same with your toilet, pouring vinegar into the bowl, letting it sit, scrubbing and flushing.

For the shower, shower heads can be removed and soaked overnight in vinegar. Or tie a plastic bag over the shower head — fill it with vinegar so the shower head is completely submerged, and in the morning, scrub clean. For the rest of the shower and tub, just pour vinegar on the stains and scrub as you go. There are so many uses for vinegar. Most vinegars will last indefinitely, so be sure to stock up when they are on sale, and keep plenty in your home for all your cleaning needs.

MULTIPLE DRYER SHEETS. Dear Heloise: I saw a letter asking about a lady using five dryer sheets at the laundromat (Heloise here: It was in a previous column that a reader had seen another woman do this). I save my used dryer sheets, and when I am out of sheets, I recycle the used ones, using several at a time. Maybe that was what she was doing. I read you every day as my mom read your mom. Thanks for all the good tips. — Kathy L., via email

■ Kathy, that could have been what she was doing. Of course, the makers of the sheets say to use them only once because the majority of the fabric softener has been used the first time. My take? Give it a try, and if it works for you, go for it.

EASY YOGURT. Dear Heloise: I usually have a small container of yogurt at my desk for an afternoon snack, but I'm always cleaning up the specks of yogurt that come flying out of the container when I pull back the foil top. My computer monitor and keyboard get hit the worst.

But this solves it: Now I punch a tiny hole in the foil first with the tip of a pencil or ballpoint pen. That lets the pressure out safely, and no more mess. — Loni C., San Antonio ■ Superstar Barbra Streisand is coming home to Brooklyn.

The Oscar- and Grammy-winning diva was born and raised in Brooklyn but never has performed publicly there — until now.

Brooklyn's new Barclays Center arena announced Wednesday that Streisand will give a concert there Oct. 11.

Barclays Center still is under construction and will be home to the NBA's Nets. CEO Brett Yormark said Streisand's concert will be a defining moment for the arena.

Streisand spokesman Ken Sunshine said performing near her old neighborhood will be very emotional and poignant for Streisand.

Streisand is one of the world's best-selling recording artists and is one of the few entertainers who have won an Oscar, Emmy, Grammy, and Tony Award. She rarely performs in public.

■ At least he hopes to hit a breaking ball.

Emmy-Award winning actor Bryan Cranston, who plays Walter White in the Albuquerque, N.M.-based TV show “Breaking Bad,” announced Tuesday he'll participate in a celebrity softball game scheduled later this month at an Albuquerque park.

Cranston said he expects his celebrity team to “get slaughtered.”

IN THE STARS

HAPPY BIRTHDAY: Look, assess and proceed. You have the necessary attributes to reach your goals, but you have to be willing to step up to the plate and take charge. Trust in your abilities, expand your knowledge and emphasize that you have what it takes to be a leader. Don't look back or waste time on trivial matters. Your numbers are 8, 13, 23, 26, 34, 38, 49.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't labor over personal matters you cannot change. Concentrate on work and you will advance. Putting in long hours and paying attention to detail will put you ahead of the competition. A professional look will add to your marketability. **♈

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You'll dazzle everyone with your astute way of explaining and presenting what you have to offer. Networking will help you seal a deal or obtain information you need to move forward with something or someone you want to pursue. **♉

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do a little soul-searching and make a list of the things you must do to make your life better. Start with your home, family and obligations, and you will discover a way to ease your stress and improve your lifestyle. **♊

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Do something out of the ordinary. A change of scenery or trying a new activity will motivate you to expand your circle of friends and make a positive move toward a better future. Life is what you make it. **♋

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be careful not to get in someone's way. You have to protect your reputation and avoid getting involved in gossip. Work hard to complete any job or responsibility you've been given. Show strength, courage, accountability and integrity. **♌

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are in a much better position than anticipated. Don't hold back, waiting to see what everyone else does. Be a leader, stand up and speak to your peers. You can make a difference. Opportunities will develop if you take charge. **♍

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money matters may be of concern if you have taken on too much debt. Set up a budget you can live with, or sell off assets to ease your stress. Sizing down will enable you to establish a better opportunity to move forward. **♎

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Communication will result in a chance to partner with someone. Whether it is a personal or professional relationship you seek, you will connect with people who can contribute something worthwhile. Equality should be your goal. **♏

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Haste makes waste. Slow down and leave nothing to chance. Relax and let things fall into place naturally. Force will backfire and leave you feeling defeated. Put time and effort into important relationships, not an impossible deadline. **♐

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do something that will improve your living conditions. An investment will pay off, and a chance to show off in front of friends or relatives will boost your reputation and put you in a good position when it comes to personal decisions. **♑

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do whatever it takes to stabilize your financial, emotional and personal life. It's important not to promise what you can't deliver. Stick to the truth and open your heart to someone who has been there for you through thick and thin. **♒

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Consider past experiences when making a personal decision. You have to make the right choice if you expect to find happiness in the future. You cannot base your next move on what others want when it's what you need that counts. **♓
